

Kaete Klausner Scholarships
for MA& Doctoral Students New Immigrants ("Olim Hadashim") for the academic year 2022-2023

The Hebrew University is pleased to announce the distribution of Kaete Klausner scholarships. There will be granted three scholarships for MA students (in the research track) and two scholarships for PhD students learning at the Hebrew University, who are New Immigrants* ("Olim Hadashim").

For the purposes of this scholarship , "New Immigrants", are students who received their Israeli citizenship after October 2016.

* Returning Residents are not eligible for this scholarship.

Preference will be given to candidates who made Aliyah alone.

Furthermore, candidates who began their MA studies within 6 years of receiving Israeli citizenship and are continuing to a doctoral degree are eligible to apply if they do so not more than one year after completing their MA studies.

The scholarships are intended, as a first priority, for candidates who begun their MA or PhD studies in the academic year (2022-2023). However, the applications of new immigrants, as defined above, who are already in the process of studying for a master's degree and a doctorate at the Hebrew University (currently in their second year for a master's degree or in their started already the PhD studies) will also be considered. In this case the scholarship will be given for one year to the MA student and for up to 4 years to a PhD student, depending of the number of years that remain till the end of studies . For doctoral students that started the PHD studies before the 22/23 academic year the amount of the scholarship awarded will be the amount of the respective year in the Klausner scholarships program (see below the amounts given per year of studies).

The scholarships are intended for candidates who have completed their studies for a previous degree "with distinction" (Magna Cum Laude) at least.

One may receive this scholarship for up to two years in a row (for MA studies) or up to five years (for PhD studies) as long as they meet the academic requirements, i.e.: subject to reporting on their academic progress by the end of each year of the scholarship and recommendation from the PhD advisor. Candidates must study a full load during the period of the scholarship.

The yearly scholarship is $22,000 (for MA studies) and $27,000 (for PhD studies). In addition, awardees will receive in the first year of the scholarship a one-time sum ($1,000) for the purchase of a laptop computer. Furthermore, candidates will be awarded an additional sum as part of his/her tuition (that is to say the winner will not have an exemption of tuition):

- Doctoral students will receive $1,500/year for each of the first two years and $350/year for the remaining three years scholarship.
- MA students will receive $3,700 for each of the two years of the scholarship.

Doctoral students will receive yet an additional sum ($1,000/year) in their second and third year of the scholarship and a sum of $2,000/year and in their fourth years of the scholarship, that can be used to finance the travelling to two scientific conferences abroad.

The scholarships will be paid in monthly installments through the Hebrew University's scholarships system. All the amounts are payable in Shekels, on the 1st of each month.

Candidates should submit their application in a PDF file that will include the documents (in English or Hebrew) in the following order:

- CV and if available a list of publications. The CV must include: ID number, Israeli phone/mobile number, e-mail address, and the name of thesis advisor.
- Personal letter with candidate's presentation and detailing the research intentions.
- Photocopies of your Oleh certificate (תעודת עולה) and of the Israeli ID
- Transcripts of past studies abroad and in Israel (if it's the case)
- Two letters of recommendation from faculty members who taught the candidate (in Israel or abroad). A third letter from the thesis advisor can be added (if he's/she's already designated by the application time)

Applying to the Klausner scholarship can be done only through the faculty of the candidate.
